EMIGRANTS BEING BUNCOED.

Are Lured Away from Railroad Station and Robbed.

A number of cases have been reported lately where emigrants who have had to wait over night at the Delaware Lackawanna and Western station have been lured away by unprincipled rascals who wheedled their money out of them and then turned them adrift, penniless and friendless in a strange land. Special Officer Goerlitz, who has been keeping a lookout for these miscreants discovered Michael Finnerty, at an early hour Saturday morning, leading two Hungarians away from the station. The officer arrested him, but as there was no evidence of any criminal act forthcoming the alderman released

Wilkes-Barre Printers Had to Be Content with Bowling.

The Wilkes-Barre Record printers came up Saturday to play ball with the Scranton prints at Athletic park, but owing to the rain it was turned into bowling at the St. Cloud. Both sides showed remarkable facility in tossing the big balls and some extraordinary runs were the result. Scranton won by a small score.

MINERS WILL GO BACK TODAY. Strike of Employes of Lehigh Valley

Coal Company at an End. The strike of the Lehigh Valley Coal ompany miners at and near Wilkes-Barre has been settled and the men will return to work today. The men have agreed to use the Wolf safety lamp in the gassy portion of the Dorrance and the company is to have a sufficient numbers of "firers" so that there will be no delay in waiting to have the blasts fired.

On Friday the grievance committee of the strikers waited upon the officers of the company and submitted the following:

1. We ask that the company do not make it obligatory upon us to use the Wolf safety lamp.

2. If we agree to the use of the lamp will the company agree that our cars shall have a less topping of coal?

3. If the company insists on the use of the lamp we ask that we be paid 5 cents a foot for setting props.

4. We ask the company to keep the lamp in repair and that it be furnished to us free of cost.

5. We ask that we be charged nothing for repairing of the lamps unless damage shall be done by willful carelessness.

6. That the lamp shall not be used uness where the condition of the mine makes it necessary.

To these questions the company made answer as follows:

1. Owing to the gaseous condition of the Dorrance colliery we considered it unsafe and imprudent for the sections of the mine referred to to be operated in any other way than by the use of the safety lamp, and we must insist on this

2 and 3. This is simply another way of requesting an advance in wages, which the condition of the coal trade will not permit us to grant at present 4. 5 and 6. That was our original proposition and we agree to it.

The strike started June 29 at the Dorrance and the men at the Prospect and tributary mines went out in sympathy, affecting altogether about The Wolf safety lamp is to be used altogether in that portion of the Dorrance northwest of the shaft.

OUTLOOK IS ENCOURAGING.

Probability That Miners Will Have Plenty of Work This Fall.

"With an optimistic spirit abroad and financial interests satisfied with the way things are going, with the anthracite producers working together more harmoniously than in years and more closely allied than ever before, there is every reason to anticipate a good run of business this fall and profits all around," says the Mining and Engineering Journal in discussing the anthracite coal trade. "The June production is said to have been close to 4,000,000 tons, a larger output than anticipated. However, the heavy demand for shipment up the lakes continues, though shippers do not relish the prevailing trade rates. In the east trade is oulet. "Some coal is going into storage, but the amount is not enough to be worthy of especial mention. It is stat-ed that the July production will be between 3,375,000 and 4,000,000 tons, and from the fact that a lot of coal must go west yet, it is thought that this amount will be taken without overloading the market.

"There seems little prospect of any labor troubles of importance and miners will have steadier work than in six or seven years. The 25 cent advance of July 1 has brought actual prices up nearly to the level of May quotations."

MENTION OF SOME MEN OF THE HOUR

CAREER OF WILLIS L. MOORE OF WEATHER BUREAU.

He Was Born in This City and Reached His Present Position by His Own Unnided Efforts-The Practical Benefit of the Weather Bureau. System of Warning That Is Employed-J. D. Ferber Spent Yesterday at Atlantic City.

The fact that Willis L. Moore, chief of the country's weather bureau, was born in this city makes him a personage of special interest to Scrantonians. He is now spending a few days in this city, as told in The Tribune of Saturday, enjoying a needed rest from the arduous labors as chief of the weather bureau. Incidentally he is looking after some real estate in this city of which he is the owner.

Professor Moore's career is a remarkable illustration of what a high ambition, combined with determination and energy, can do. Early in life, he was thrown on his own resources and went west, hoping to make his fortune in the Black Hills. But Dame Fortune was shy, and, after a year or two of extreme hardships, he turned his face eastward again, and came to Burlington, Iowa, where he secured a place on the Daily Hawkeye. He began at the foot of the ladder, learning the printer's trade and setting type, and gradually working up until he became a re-porter under Robert Burdette.

His industry and the quickness with which he seized opportunities had at-tracted the notice of the proprietor of the paper, Frank Hatton, who, about that time, received his appointment to the postmaster generalship at Washington. When he went to the national capital, he took young Moore with him. and soon afterwards secured for him a position in the meteorological department of the signal service (now the weather bureau).

Here he showed such a willingness to work, and ability to comprehend the science, that he was subsequently placed in the training school at Fort Myer, for military instruction, where he ranked second in a class of thirty-

From Fort Myer, he was transferred o the central office at Washington; and, while there, he brought into play his knowledge of printing and devised a mechanical arrangement of type, by which the labor of producing the synoptical maps has been so greatly reduced that now they can be issued in less than two hours, where formerly it required six.

Step by step Mr. Moore rose in the service, until, in 1894, a professorship in the weather bureau became vacant. and an open examination was held to fill it. Mr. Moore was among the contestants at the examination. There were, besides, twenty-three college graduates, representing the leading colleges of the country, who took the examination, which was in the natural sciences and required an essay on weather-forecasting and storm-warnings. Mr. Moore had not the benefit of a college education, but so thorough had been his self-education that he easily led all of his competitors, and was, in consequence, awarded the pro-

He was assigned to the charge of the Chicago office, where, during the winters of 1894 and 1895, he made such a phenomenal record in forecasting the cold waves and heavy snows, and his executive skill in the management of his office was so admirable, that in the following summer President Cleveland appointed him chief of the weather oureau, a position he has held ever

The present high standard of the serice and the progressive methods that are being adopted in it are largely due to Professor Moore's intense interest in the science, and his determination to continue its development. It is of interest to note the vast amount of practical benefit the weather bureau confers upon the country. Mr. Moore frankly says that the service has not advanced much beyond the empirical stage of weather-forecasting, and that, as yet, there is but little prospect of either accurately prophesying the weather for weeks or months in the future, or of stating positively just what the weather will be, locally, at any given time.

It is a noteworthy fact, however, that within the four years since he has been at the head of the bureau, not a single at the head of the bureau, not a single March, Hands Across the Sea.....Sousa great storm has swept across the country, or at sea, that the danger warnings of the service have not been sent out well in advance of the storms. This has been of incalculable advantage to commerce of all kinds.

Along the Atlantic coast, there are more than 17,000 sailing vessels, and 4,000 steamers that enter and leave ports between Maine and Florida, their cargoes being estimated at $7,000,000. Formerly, these crafts were at the mercy of the terrific West Indian hurricanes that sweep up from the tropics and skirt along the Atlantic shore line. especially from August to October, but ow signal stations are operated at many points along the Caribbean Sea. the northern ports of South America, and the West India Islands, and danger warnings are invariably sent out ahead of a storm; in consequence of which, vessels are held in port until after it has passed.

Millions of dollars, not to speak of numan lives, are thus saved annually. On two occasions, a census was taken mmediately after the passage of severe hurricanes, to determine the value of property held in the harbors by the danger warnings sent out in advance of these storms. In one case, the fig-ures were placed at $34,000,000, and in the other at $38,000,000. The bureau red flags, with black centers, holsted one above the other. Whenever this signal is flown it is understood by mariners that vessels of all descriptions should remain in port. The system of warning vessels engaged in coastwise trade, and on the Great Lakes, is very complete. In addition to the weather bureau offices, located on the seacoast and lakes, ther are, at nearly every seaport, displaymen paid to hoist the wind-signal flag upon receipt of telegraphic instructions to do so.

J. D. Ferber, who is Sheriff Pryor's chief outside deputy, was down at Atlantic City yesterday listening to the story of the wild waves. He was one of the conspicuous figures on the board walk. Mr. Ferber has been a deputy in the sheriff's office for nearly five years, and during that time has done the greater part of the work in connection with serving writs and conducting sales. He knows every inch of ducting sales. He knows every inch of the county as thoroughly as he does Penn avenue, where he has resided since childhood, and has an acquaintance that is probably not duplicated by any young man of his age in the county. Since he attained his majority he has been a tireless worker for the success of the Republican party, and it is not improbable that before many years roll around he will be before the voters as a candidate for sheriff. There has been some gossip to the effect that he will seek the Republican nomination for theriff next year. He has not proclaimed that fact as yet, but if should do so he will be able to make it very interesting for the other aspirants for the nomination.

Captain E. A. Godwin, who had charge of the United States recruiting office in this city during April and May has just been promoted from the rank of captain to that of major. He enlisted in a West Virginia regiment during the rebellion, being then between fifteen and sixteen years of age. He was discharged July 8, 1865, and was appointed a cadet at West Point, Octo-ber 17, 1865. On June 15, 1870, he was made second lieutenant of the Eighth cavalry, and on October 2, 1876, pro-moted to the first Heutenancy.

Ten years later, on July 5, 1886, he was appointed captain of the Eighth United States cavalry, and during the late war, on May 21, 1898, was made colonel of a regiment of immune infantry, being mustered out later with his command and resuming the rank of captain. The date of his commission as major will be from July 1 of the present year. Major Godwin has an enviable reputation as an Indian fighter, having participated in some of the flercest campaigns of the last thirty years against the redskins.

Large Company of Young People Entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Linen.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Linen entertained a large company of young people Saturday afternoon, when a putting match was the feature of the occasion. The rain seriously interfered with the game, but between showers and even during the heavy downpour several indefatigable golfers played persistently about the little course of nine holes, on which putters only are used. Mr. A. E. Hunt, fr., won the first prize, a putter, with a score of 46. Miss Anderson was second, her score being 47. The prize was a gold stick pin.

Among the guests were Miss Anderson, Miss Hunt, Miss Anna Archbald. LACKAWANNA MEN GETTING TOGETHER

TRAINMEN'S LODGES ARE RE-UNITED.

Grand Master P. H. Morrissey Comes Here to Direct the Consolidation. The Engineers and the Federated Board-It Is Not Thought That Any Trouble Will Ensue, But They Believe There Is Nothing Like Being Prepared-Speaks Highly of Mr. Truesdale.

That the employes of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad are not wholly oblivious to the wisdom of the old maxim, "In time of peace, pre-pare for war," is being demonstrated almost daily by one incident or another that comes to public notice. Yesterday brought forth an incident that can not be taken for anything but a direct move in line with the advice of that maxim. It was nothing less than the consolidation of the two lodges of trainmen in this city, which for years have worked independently of each other and with none too friendly relations.

The original lodge was Lackawanna, No. 95. It had a strong membership and treasury, and was regarded as one of the leading subordinate lodges of the entire order. Internecine dissensions, however, came about eight years ago and the upshot was the withdrawal of a large number of its members and the organization of another lodge, Moses Taylor, No. 420.

NECESSITY WAS APPARENT.

Several attempts were made to bring about a reunion, but they one after the other falled, until the change of management in the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western occurred and the mem-bers of both lodges were brought to realize the possible necessity of presenting a strong front. The national officers took a hand in the movement and yesterday the grand master of the order, P. H. Morrissey, of Peorla, Ill., had the gratification of seeing his advice carried out.

The reunion was effected at A. O. U. W. hall on Lackawanna avenue. The new lodge took the number of the original lodge and the name of its offspring. abining the two into Moses Taylor lodge, No. 95. The officers elected were: Master, George Thomas; secretary, M Tigue; financier, John Costello; collector, John Lyons. The united lodge now stands almost at the head of the order in point of numbers and the strength of its treas-

TO GO TO NEW YORK

Tomorrow night the chairmen of the general committees, respectively, of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and Order of Railway Conductors, George M. Wallace and John J. Finnerty, will go to New York to meet President Truesdale on Welnesday and receive his answer on the rules which these organizations presented for his approval, week before last. There is little likelihood but that an amicable agreement will be reached. President Truesdale has a record of successfully avoiding any disagreements with his men, and from the intimations he gave the committee when it called to present the new schedule of rules, it is quite safe to assume that his record will not be broken in this

Grand Master Morrisey, in discuss ing the question vesterday afternoon with a Tribune reporter, said: "I do not anticipate the least trouble on the Lackawanna. I have had extensive dealings with Mr. Truesdale in the west and feel confident from what I know of the man that he will treat his men fairly. This, coupled with the fact that the men are not asking anything unreasonable, leads me to firm conclusion that everything will be settled amic ably and to the satisfaction of both the men and the company." WITH THE ENGINEERS.

The general committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has not as yet concluded its sessions. It has not been given out what action, if any, has been taken on the question of joining the federated board, or in other words, combining with the conductors, trainmen and firemen in a system of federation. It is understood that the engineers are willing to combine and that if the ban against the engineers can be raised at the national headquarters of the other organizations, they will be welcomed into the feder-The same motives which prompted the reunion of the trainmen will, it is thought, effect a reconcillation between the engineers and the other organizations, and that in the course of a very few weeks every employe of the Lackawanna system from Hoboken to Buffalo, including engineers, firemen, trainmen, conductors, switchmen and telegraphers, will be represented in one general committee with power to act for all alike.

Badly Injured While Trying to Get on a Train in This City.

Daniel O'Boyle, a young man residing in Jessup, was severely wounded while attempting to board a freight train on Saturday afternoon.

He was walking along the Delaware and Hudson track and while near Carbon street heard a train coming from behind. He waited for the caboose to pass and as it did so he made a spring for the handle on the rear platform. He grasped it but his hand slipped, and he was thrown to the ground, his head striking one of the rails, rendering him unconscious. He was carried to a nearby house, where his injuries were attended to.
